

Jacek Gurczyński

Synthetic a priori

There is a thought.

I am happy to answer any substantive argument that I am wrong. That the sentence: "There is a thought." Is not a synthetic a priori sentence.

I am sure that it is and that I am not mistaken. I am sure that it is and that I am not mistaken. And that it does not matter.